ST. CHARLES NAMED ONE OF MONEY MAGAZINE'S TOP 100 CITIES

St. Charles won recognition in the August edition of Money Magazine as being among the 100 Best Places to live in the nation. St. Charles was honored for its history as one of the oldest towns west of the Mississippi coupled with our City's modern riverfront recreation and a rapidly growing suburban community.

Mayor York indicated she's not the least bit surprised at the outcome. "St. Charles receiving this recognition underscores that we really do have a Famous Past and a Fabulous Future," she said. "Plus, the attention comes at a perfect time given our City will celebrate its Bicentennial anniversary next year."

Three cities from St. Charles County made the list of 100 Best Communities with populations between 50,000 and 300,000. St. Peters was 60th, O'Fallon 68th and St. Charles 82nd. The list took into account job growth, income increases, cost of living and housing, school quality, safety and other factors.

CITY REVERTS FROM FLOOD WATCH TO FLOOD RELIEF EFFORTS

Mayor York and the St. Charles City Council would like to publicly thank the Army Corps of Engineers, the Missouri National Guard, the St. Charles Fire and Police Departments, City and County staff members and a host of concerned residents and business owners for their support during recent flood relief efforts at the Elm Point levee located on the north side of town.

As Mississippi flood waters continue to recede, the community's collaborative focus centers predominantly on restoration activities.

For anyone interested in assisting restoration efforts, donations can be made by contacting the American Red Cross at 314-516-2800. The Salvation Army has also set up a flood relief fund. Donations can be made at stl-salvationarmy.org, by calling 1-800-725-2769, or by mail at Salvation Army Midland Division, P.O. Box 6040, St. Louis, MO 63139.

The federal Department of Labor has set up a website to help Midwest flood victims. It has posted information on unemployment insurance, temporary jobs, personal safety during cleanup and updates on federal disaster areas. The website is dol.gov/opa/flood-recovery.htm. Information is also available by calling 866-487-2365 toll-free. Access is free and will not impede private wireless connections to nearby homes or businesses.

Channel 20 Has Moved!

Attention St. Charles residents...

Recently, Charter Cable relocated your local government cable access channel.

You can still enjoy your local channel at its new location.

Regular programming includes:

- City Council Meetings
- City Board/Commission Meetings
- Special Events
- Art and Music Programs
- St. Charles School Board Meetings
- Municipal Services/Program Info
- Public Health & Safety Information
- Historical Documentaries
- and much, much more!

Here's how you can tune in and find us in St. Charles:

- If you have a Charter set-top converter box, tune to Channel 990, _____ or _____
- If your cable line is connected directly to your TV/VCR which has a digital cable/ "QAM" tuner:
 1. Use the unit's auto channel setting function, set for "cable" or "digital;" after that process is complete,
 2. Tune to Channel 118 and use the "channel up arrow" to find the City Channel. It may appear as 118-20, 118.2 or 118.20.

NOTE: If the next channel up the dial is 119, you must obtain a Charter set-top converter box to view the City Channel on your current TV/VCR.

ST. CHARLES HONORS THREE LOCAL EMPLOYERS

-SERVICE- -RETAIL- -MANUFACTURING/ INDUSTRIAL-

Nadine Boon, Economic Development Director, City of St. Charles, Stephen Kinsey and John Borisenko of ESRI, Patti York, Mayor of St. Charles

ESRI SERVES UP WHAT ITS CUSTOMERS NEED

One of Environmental Systems Research Institute's areas of expertise is helping companies find the best places in which to locate. So it should come as no surprise that when ESRI decided to locate on South Main Street in St. Charles some 16 years ago, success would follow.

New York-based ESRI specializes in geographic information system technology, commonly referred to as GIS. Government officials on every level have utilized the services of ESRI for years to help them do a better job of planning, and GIS technology is increasingly meeting the needs of businesses, educators and even conservationists.

Regional Manager Stephen Kinzy said the St. Charles office started out in 1991 with four employees, including him—now he has 55 employees. As of 2006, the office here had 18,450 customers. Approximately 70 percent of the office's business comes from local governments, Kinzy said.

While technological sectors continue to grow, GIS technology "has just exploded the past few years as you can tell by the number of customers we have in the area," Kinzy said.

ESRI has a variety of compensation, incentive and benefit plans to recognize employees. For example, the company's profit-sharing plan, and that can equate to as much as 8 percent of an employee's salary (over and above their merit raises during the course of the year," Kinzy said.)

ESRI also picks up the entire cost of medical insurance for its employees and their families, a rarity these days. Last year alone the medical costs for the company went up 20 percent, "so it's not a trivial matter for the company," Kinzy said.

ESRI also does its part to ensure a bright future for the region. As an example, the company probably has given the Missouri Botanical Garden more than $1 million in software over the years, he said.

CULVER'S SATISFIES EMPLOYEES AND CUSTOMERS

It wasn't too long ago that many fast-food restaurants in this area were begging for help. That has never been the case at Culver's during its seven-year history in St. Charles.

"I've never had trouble finding people to work," said Mary Brauer, who with her husband, Parker, own and operate the Culver's on Muegge Road. In fact, she added, "We've never advertised. We have people come in and ask for applications."

The Brauers employ more than 50 people, about one dozen of whom work full time. Employees are recognized with merit raises, bonuses, promotions and an incentive called the Stay with Us for College Program. Employees who work a minimum of 15 hours a week, carry a full-credit course and keep a 3.0 grade point average qualify for $250 a semester that they can use to pay for whatever college expense they see fit. Employees also can apply for scholarships through Culver's corporate office in Wisconsin.

The company offers full-time employees a number of benefits, including a 401(k) retirement plan, vacation, health insurance and maternity leave.

"Parker and I have told our managers that if they ever wanted to go out on their own and open their own Culver's, we would be more than happy to help them," Brauer said. Currently, one employee is seriously considering that option.

Satisfied employees help to create satisfied customers. That seems to be the case at the St. Charles Culver's where sales grown an average 5 percent annually. "We have grown every year that we've been open. We've been very well-received in the community," Mary Brauer said.

Culver's also is active in the community. On Monday and Tuesday nights youth and not-for-profit groups work as waiters in the restaurant in return for a percentage of the sales. "It's just a great way to touch a lot of people in the community," Brauer said.

SYSCO FINDS SUCCESS IN ST. CHARLES

"There was nothing anywhere near us," said Mike Barr about the time 13 years ago when SYSCO Food Services of St. Louis built a major food distribution facility along Highway 370 in St. Charles.

That certainly is no longer the situation. Barr, the president and CEO of SYSCO St. Louis, now notes that major companies like Coca-Cola Enterprises and Glazer's Wholesale Distributors have built multimillion-dollar distribution centers nearby.

SYSCO St. Louis has contributed to that growth. The company completed a $9 million expansion in March of last year, increasing the facility's capacity by 35 percent. "Our business has been accelerating. We just ran out of room," Barr said.

The company provides food and food-related items to numerous clients, including restaurants, hospitals and nursing homes. The company also supplies many of the region's major sports and entertainment venues.

The company conducts a good deal of employee training in-house, and at the corporate office in Houston, Texas. SYSCO also utilizes what it calls a Best Business Practices Website. The company has more than 120 operations nationwide, and each operation can submit what it thinks is a best practice, such as how to best control damage in a warehouse. Once approved, the practice goes on the website so that other operations can learn and improve their practices, Barr said.

SYSCO St. Louis offers an attractive benefits package, including medical, dental and vision insurance, tuition reimbursement, an employee stock purchase plan, and a 401(k) plan in addition to the company-funded retirement plan. There also is a wide array of incentive programs.

In addition, the company supports the community, providing donations to Operation Food Search, the March of Dimes and other worthy causes. Last year SYSCO and its employees adopted two local families, making the holidays a little brighter for 11 children.

FELZIEN RETURNS AS PR/COMMUNICATIONS COORDINATOR

Carol Rosse-Felzien (Felzien) has returned to the City of St. Charles in the capacity of PR/Communications Coordinator. Her appointment to the position was effective May 5. She reports directly to David Rosenwasser, Director of the Greater Saint Charles Convention and Visitors Bureau (CVB).

"We couldn't be happier to once again steal Carol away from the private sector," said Mayor Patti York. "Everyone on staff is excited to have Carol back in the fold as a member of the St. Charles City team. She is a terrific asset in promoting events, projects and activities for both the City and the CVB."

Rosenwasser echoed the Mayor's sentiment indicating having a full-time PR person on board further enhances efforts to showcase local events and the greater St. Charles area as a regional destination. "We're already putting Carol's expertise to good use," he said. "She comes to us at a perfect time in advance of Tour of Missouri and all that is unique and noteworthy in this locale, especially during the height of our tourism season."

Felzien returns to St. Charles with more than 25 years of experience in corporate and civic communications, public relations and marketing. During her career, she has served as Media Relations Manager for Southwestern Bell, Director of PR for Visiting Nurse Association, PR and Marketing Manager for SSM Health Care and Director of Corporate Marketing for MTM. Most recently, she was on staff as an Account Supervisor for KolbeCo Marketing Resources in Dardenne Prairie. She previously served on the St. Charles City staff in 2004.

"It is a privilege to be selected for the St. Charles position, and have the opportunity to be a part of all that the City holds in store today and in the future," Felzien said. "I'm honored to work with Mayor York, the City Council, the CVB team, City staff members and area residents and business owners to promote our fair City. I encourage people to call me directly at 636-255-6128 or through e-mail at CFelzien@Historicstcharles.com

Felzien served nine consecutive terms as President of the St. Louis Chapter of Women in Communications, Inc. She has served on the Jennings School District Board of Education and was a member of Leadership O'Fallon's inaugural class in 2003. She has also served on the board for the Tri-County United Way and the Lake Saint Louis-Dardenne Prairie Chamber of Commerce, and as a member at large of the Junior League of St. Louis.

Felzien is a cum laude graduate of the University of Missouri-St. Louis, with a Bachelor of Arts degree in English and a minor in Communications and Writing.

NEW CITY WEBSITE TO LAUNCH IN LATE AUGUST

Mayor Patricia York and the St. Charles City Council are pleased to announce that the City will launch an entirely new website in late August. The new site will reside at a new address - www.stcharlescitemo.gov.

Residents will notice some major changes at first glance such as the updated look, increased information organized by audience, improved navigation, and search capabilities.

Developed by Quilogy, Inc., www.stcharlescitemo.gov represents the second major redesign of the City's web site since its inception in 1996.

This new site came out of a very in-depth research process that began last fall," said Mayor York. "We visited lots of other city sites. We talked with residents. We interviewed our staff. We initiated our redesign knowing what was important to everyone."

Here are some of the best new features residents can look forward to:

- ◆ An "I Would Like To..." section on the home page will provide answers to the most commonly asked questions.
- ◆ Navigation built by key audiences - residents, businesses, and visitors - means that every user can more easily find the information they need.
- ◆ A Forms library will hold download able PDF files of most City forms and applications.
- ◆ A more robust Calendar section will feature two calendars - one for leisure events such as festivals and concerts and the other for City meetings.
- ◆ A Feature section on the home page will highlight the latest new story or a unique place of interest.
- ◆ A Search function will allow you to quickly find the information you need.

Even though the new site hasn't yet launched, further enhancements are already in the works. Watch for these items in the future:

- ◆ Streaming video
- ◆ GIS mapping

BOND ISSUE TO BE ON THE BALLOT AUGUST 5

The City of St. Charles and ShowMe Aquatics & Fitness, a mission-based organization, have teamed up to potentially develop a new recreational facility that will allow people of all ages and disabilities to play together under one roof.

The proposed $40 million project would be funded as a joint effort between the City and ShowMe Aquatics. ShowMe would provide $10 million, in addition to building an endowment fund to ensure future services.

The City of St. Charles will ask voters on August 5 to approve a bond issue – Proposition C – that would authorize up to $30 million in General Obligation Bonds.

The bond issue would not impose any new tax on residents, but authorize bonds to be paid off through the city's general revenue fund.

If approved, the 120,000-square-foot Community Freedom Center would be located on the former K-Mart site off Veteran's Memorial Parkway, adjacent to I-70.

The community center would include a 16,000-square-foot fitness center featuring state-of-the-art equipment and specialized program areas for people of all ages and abilities. The center would also include an indoor water park, the largest indoor track in the region, four multi-temperature pools, two full-size gymnasiums for basketball, volleyball, etc., and one auxiliary gymnasium for the purposes of indoor soccer and roller hockey.

In addition, there would be dedicated senior and teen activity centers, a leisure lounge and cafe, community meeting rooms and outdoor play areas for children.

ShowMe Fitness & Aquatics, whose mission is “to promote health, fitness and quality of life in an environment that is accommodating, accessible and as barrier-free as possible” would manage the facility.

If approved by voters this August, preliminary work would begin in late 2008 with construction of the Community Freedom Center to start in 2009. According to the plan, the center's opening is slated for fall 2010.

The City of St. Charles will ask voters on August 5 to approve a bond issue – Proposition C – that would authorize up to $30 million in General Obligation Bonds. The bond issue would not impose any new tax on residents.

MAYOR'S MESSAGE

St. Charles Looks Ahead to the Future

We use a number of taglines here in St. Charles that describe our City perfectly ... The City that Works; Fun Then, Fun Now; Unlock the Possibilities; Proud Past, Promising Future. Now we have a new theme associated with our City's strategic plan, entitled: Famous Past ... Fabulous Future!

What an apropos motto for a City like ours that is preparing to celebrate its Bicentennial anniversary in 2009. It is, indeed, an exciting time to honor our 200 years as an incorporated City.

As you well know, our roots are based on a tremendous history, from the site where Lewis & Clark left to explore the newly acquired Louisiana Purchase to the first free school west of the Mississippi – the Academy of the Sacred Heart.

Afterall, St. Charles was the site of the first State Capitol of Missouri, and the federal highway system started right here in St. Charles, heading east and west to connect the entire continent.

We've welcomed guests to our community since 1769, and today serve as the county seat of the state's fastest growing county. As the second largest City in the St. Louis area, we have an awesome responsibility for not only acknowledging our roots but planning our future wisely.

And, that's precisely the impetus behind our long-range strategic planning process. As you well know, quality of life in St. Charles is second to none. We have safe streets, excellent parks and adequate funding for future infrastructure needs. So the quintessential question of our time is...How do we make an already great community even better?

Michael Spurgeon, Director of Administration, is at the helm of this planning effort, which not only takes into account where we are today, but also identifies where we go from here. The strategic planning group comprising a host of City volunteers and staff are working hand-in-hand with the Truman School of Public Policy from a facilitation standpoint.

As you might imagine, smart growth coupled with riverfront development and redevelopment discussions will be at the fore-front of our public agenda over the course of the next 10 to 15 months. Another key issue to ponder in addition to maintaining and building upon our greatness will be the importance of transportation going forward.

Not only that, but we welcome and encourage your input from start to finish.

The overall planning process will:

- Achieve a shared community vision
- Pursue and plan for quality growth
- Encourage citizen engagement in our community's future
- Set goals for the community, including our local government
- Provide guidance for municipal operations

You'll be hearing a great deal more about the strategic planning process in the months ahead. In fact, I hope you'll take the opportunity to get involved in upcoming community dialogue sessions and town hall meetings.

In the meantime, please stay tuned for more information to be provided via the City's website, local cable access channel (Channel 990 or Channel 118-20), and future editions of the City News.

Each and every one of us brings a unique perspective to the table, and the City of St. Charles rests collectively on our shoulders. I look forward to being a part of the process and the ensuing end result...and I hope you will make time to take part in our City's future, too. Thank you in advance for your support!

P.S. I am looking for volunteers to serve on our 2009 Bicentennial Committee. Please call my office at 636-949-3268 if you're interested in being a part of this commemorative opportunity celebrating the history of Saint Charles.
